My First Impressions Completing the IxDF Course

I recently completed my first IxDF course, Emotional Design: How to Make Products People Will Love, and it was an insightful experience. The course taught me how emotions influence user behavior and the importance of creating emotional connections through design. I learned about the three levels of emotional design—visceral, behavioral, and reflective—and how to apply these concepts to make products users love. This course gave me a fresh perspective on design and boosted my confidence. In my article, My IxDF Journey: Exploring Emotional Design, I describe my first impressions and experience with the course in more detail. I highly recommend it to anyone starting out in design!
